

JOHN THE EXARCH AND HIS SOURCES: NEW SOURCES OF THE SIXTH BOOK OF THE ŠESTODNEV

Lara SELS – Ghent University (UGent)

In the sixth book of his *Šestodnev*¹ John the Exarch (second half 9th century – first half 10th century) mentions a certain Gregory, who is called “a true brother of the Great Basil”. Without a doubt John is referring to Gregory of Nyssa (ca.331/340–ca.394), one of the three Cappadocian fathers and brother of Basil of Caesarea. The reason for John’s mentioning the bishop of Nyssa is obvious: he refers to one of the sources of the last book of his Šestodnev, which deals with the Creation of Man, viz. Gregory of Nyssa’s anthropological treatise De hominis opificio (CPG 3154).² The importance of this treatise as a source for John’s hexaemeral work – a source which was, however, suspected of containing heretical elements – has remained unnoticed up to the present moment.

1. In search of the sources

Some years after the publication of Rudolf Aitzetmüller’s scholarly edition of the complete text of the Šestodnev (seven vols.; 1958-1975),³ Ivan Dujčev wrote:

Bodjanskij – Шестоднев составленный Иоанном Эксархом Болгарским. По хранительному списку Московской Синодальной библиотеки 1263 года. As is known, Aitzetmüller used Bodjanskij’s work for the reproduction of Synodal 345. For some remarks concerning the insufficiency of Bodjanskij’s edition, see e.g. A. LESKIEN, “Zum Šestodnev des Exarchen Johannes”, Archiv für Slavische Philologie 26 (1904): 1-4. An edition of the early Russian redaction of the Šestodnev has been published by Г.С. Le Hexaémeron de Jean l’Exarque n’est, strictement parlant, qu’une compilation parfois assez libre, relevant de sources premières de l’époque patristique grecque. Pour mieux comprendre le texte paléobulgare, il est absolument nécessaire de tenir compte des textes grecs utilisés. Ajoutons tout de suite la difficulté fondamentale: établir avec précision ces textes patristique que l’auteur paléobulgare avait dans les mains.⁴

Although scholarship, especially subsequent to Aitzetmüller’s edition, has shown ample attention to the Exarch’s exegetical magnum opus – without a doubt one of the major achievements of Old Slavonic literature at the time of Symeon – few publications have been dedicated to the problem of the Byzantine sources. As is known, the Šestodnev contains some clues for the identification of the source texts: the Exarch himself points to the “Hexaëmeron of St. Basil” – that is, Basil of Caesarea’s Homiliae IX in Hexaëmeron (CPG 2835)⁵ – as his main source.⁶

A first period of research into the sources of the Šestodnev – already set in with the work of Konstantin Kalajdović (1792-1832)⁷ and Aleksandr Gorskij (1812-1875) and Kapiton Nevostruev (1815-1872)⁸ – was concluded with Aitzetmüller’s edition, which contains the Greek parallels for the identified sections of the Šestodnev. Besides long passages from the already mentioned Homiliae in Hexaëmeron by Basil of Caesarea, the fragments are from Severian of Gabala’s In cosmogoniam orationes VI (CPG 4194),⁹ and, for the first book of the Šestodnev, from Theodoret of Cyrus’s Graecarum affectionum curatio (CPG 6210).¹⁰ References to smaller excerpts from primary or secondary sources – a.o. Plato, Aristotle, Gregory of Nazianzus, John Damascene, and Sextus Empiricus – can be found in Aitzetmüller’s apparatus criticus.

A later scribe rightly added the names of Severian (viz. of Gabala) and Aristotle to this passage.

Furthermore the Šestodnev contains large passages that have not as yet been traced to particular Greek parallel texts.¹¹ Apparently most of these passages are not so much translations as free paraphrases from various sources:

Wo aber bisher kein zusammenhängender griechischer Paralleltext gefunden wurde, stellt Ioanns ‘eigene’ Exegese eine freie Paraphrasierung (von Bibel und Vätern) zum jeweiligen Thema dar, die teilweise dem Aufbau der Basileios-Homilien folgt, daneben aber auch andere Kirchenväter wie Gregorios von Nazianz, Gregorios von Nyssa, Johannes von Damaskos (Ekthesis/Bogoslovie), (Ps.-)Dionysios (Areopagites?) und vor allem Aristoteles mit seinen naturphilosophischen Schriften heranzieht.¹²

However, a detailed analysis of John the Exarch’s line of reasoning may occasionally reveal his primary and secondary sources, as is the case with a large passage from book VI of the Šestodnev. This book – without a doubt a vital part of the work – deals with the creation of Man. The book opens with the famous description of the court in Preslav (VI, 1-6; 205c-206a)¹³ – an original element, undoubtedly to be ascribed to the Exarch himself. This is followed by a lengthy and largely unidentified section (VI, 6-274; 206a-239c). One particular passage has received considerable scholarly attention, viz. the medical exposition of the human physiology (VI, 171-240; 226d-235b), which indirectly goes back to the first book of Aristotle’s Historia Animalium.¹⁴ Leskien’s source-critical analysis of this fragment has revealed parallels also with Meletius the Monk’s Tractatus de natura hominis.¹⁵ The Aristotelian passage is followed by a fragment which comments on the symbolism of the numbers in the creation narrative (VI, 263-274; 238b-239c).¹⁶ Furthermore, the sixth book contains a translation of the larger part of Basil’s ninth homily in Hexaemeron

(VI, 273-352; 239c-249b), and ends with Severian of Gabala's fourth homily in cosmogoniam orationes (VI, 352-494; 249b-267a). Ivan Dujčev considered the first, unidentified part of book VI to be a 'more or less original' creation of John:

Pour toute la première partie du livre de l'Hexaémeron, consacrée au sixième jour de la Creation [...], c'est-à-dire pour le texte aux pages 1-273, on n'est pas en état d'indiquer un texte grec correspondant. Il faut donc supposer qu'il s'agit d'une œuvre plus ou moins originale de l'auteur paléobulgare.¹⁷

However, this does not exclude the possibility of John's drawing upon particular patristic sources. In fact, his dependence on Gregory of Nyssa's anthropological treatise De hominis opificio can be clearly demonstrated.

2. Gregory of Nyssa as a source for book VI of the Šestodnev

The point of departure for the present source-critical analysis of book VI is a study concerning the Greek manuscript tradition of Basil's Homiliae in Hexaëmeron. It is shown that, in many cases, the Genesis commentaries of both brothers – viz. Basil's homilies and Gregory's De hominis opificio – have been handed down together in a variable body of texts, the so-called 'Hexaëmeron-corpus'.¹⁸ It must be noted that the creation of Man has not been dealt with in Basil's homilies, while exactly this subject is discussed in book VI of John's Šestodnev.¹⁹ It was Basil's brother, Gregory, who filled this void with his De hominis opificio.²⁰ Moreover, it is known that the Exarch was acquainted with Gregory's treatise: he translated three chapters of it as appendices to his Bogoslovie, a selective translation of John Damascene's De fide orthodoxa.²¹

¹⁹ Basil's ninth homily deals with the creation of the terrestrial animals; the creation of Man is only briefly touched upon – cf. AITZETMÜLLER, Hexaëmeron VI, 341-352 (248a-249b).

²¹ The appendices have been published by Linda SADNIK, "Die Bruchstücke aus Väterschriften im Anschluß an die Übersetzung der"Εκθεσις ἀκριβὴς τῆς ὁρθοδόξου πίστεως

However, the most convincing argument to consider the possibility of John's drawing upon the De hominis opificio is the already mentioned reference to Gregory's name.

The point of departure for John's anthropological expositions in the unidentified part of book VI is the quotation from Genesis "And God said, 'Let Us make man in Our image, after Our likeness'" (1:26). The text deals with the privileged status of Man, who, being made in image of God, surpasses the animals and the rest of the creation in dignity. John emphasizes the fact that Man is a rational being, who can decide autonomously through his free will. On the one hand he rules over creation, while and on the other he remains an earthly being created from dust. In this section John allows for a lengthy exposition on the creation and the nature of the human soul.

The fact that one can find numerous general parallels with Gregory's De hominis opificio in this section of book VI could easily be explained on account of the common thematic. The treatment of the Genesis account unfolds partly along traditional lines and similar arguments recur in the writings of other patristic authors. However, there are significant parallels which cannot be ignored. The aim of this article is not to give attention to all passages where the influence of the De hominis opificio can be suspected, but to firmly establish John's dependence on Gregory's treatise in the first place. This will be done in the subsequent pages, by means of an analysis of the most striking example, namely the Exarch's exposition on the sequence of the creation of the human body and soul (VI, 85-150; 216a-224a).

3. The Creation of Body and Soul

The matter of the creation of body and soul is treated extensively in two chapters from Gregory of Nyssa's De hominis opificio,²² namely chapter 28: To those who say that souls existed before bodies, or that bodies were formed before souls; wherein is also a refutation of the fables concerning transmigration of souls, and 29: An establishment of the doctrine that the cause of the existence of soul and body is one and the same.²³ In these chapters

²³ Quotations from the De hominis opificio and from Gregory's De anima et resurrectione are given in the English translation of W. MOORE and H.A. WILSON: Select Writings and Letters of Gregory, Bishop of Nyssa. Grand Rapids, Michigan 1994 (= A Select Library of Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers of the Christian Church. Second Series. Vol. V). – hereafter quoted as M&W. For a commented French translation of the De hominis opificio, see J. LAPLACE &

Gregory criticizes both Origen's doctrine on the pre-existence of the souls²⁴ as well as the view of Origen's opponent Methodius of Olympus. In his De Resurrectione (CPG 1812)²⁵ the latter states that the soul was created after the body in accordance with the account in Genesis 2:7: "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Gregory of Nyssa admits that the question – τὸ ἀμφιβαλλόμενον ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις περὶ ψυχῆς τε καὶ σώματος – is subject of controversy. He himself takes a position between Origen and Methodius,²⁶ and argues that the body and the soul came into existence simultaneously, as one inseparable whole.²⁷ For Gregory, the unity of the human being demands a unity of principle, that is, in the original will of God as well as on the occasion of the conception of individuals.

For it is perhaps not beyond our present subject to discuss the question which has been raised in the churches touching soul and body. Some of those before our time who have dealt with the question of 'principles' think it right to say that souls have a previous existence as a people in a society of their own [...] Others on the contrary, marking the order of the making of man as stated by Moses, say, that the soul is second to the body in order of time. (Ch. 28, §1; M&W: 419)

²⁴ Origen is named here as the author of the De Principiis (CPG 1482): "Τοῖς μὲν γὰρ τῶν πρὸ ήμῶν [...] οἵς ὁ περὶ τῶν ἀρχῶν ἐπραγματεύθη λόγος [...]" (De hominis opificio ch. 28, §1); De Principiis ed. Columbia University 1958 (Ph.D. Thesis); the appendix on p. 506-537 deals with the influence of Methodius on Gregory of Nyssa.

²⁶ A remarkable parallel to chapters 28 and 29 of the De hominis opificio can be found in Gregory's Dialogus de anima et resurrectione (CPG 3149), Ed. PG 46: 11-160; 108 et seq; "For if we were to grant that the soul has lived previous to its body in some place of resort peculiar to itself, then we cannot avoid seeing some force in all that fantastic teaching lately discussed, which would explain the soul's habitation of the body as a consequence of some vice. Again on the other hand, no one who can reflect will imagine an after-birth of the soul, i.e. that it is younger than the moulding of the body." (M&W: 458; PG 46: 125)

²⁷ See for this issue K. GRONAU, Poseidonius und die jüdisch-christliche Genesisexegese. Leipzig/Berlin 1914: 193-206; also E. STEPHANOU, "La coexistence initiale du corps et de l'âme, d'après saint Grégoire de Nysse", Echos d'Orient 331 (1932): 304-315.

In this debate John the Exarch occupies a position alongside Methodius.²⁸ When he argues for the creation of the body before the soul, he defends a literal interpretation of the biblical passage. It becomes clear that John drew upon the De hominis opificio from the fact that he follows Gregory's argumentation, if only to be able to refute it. He opens the discussion on this matter by referring to 'men of the church' with an unblemished conduct of life ("църкъвни мажи добро житие нимаже"), whom he nevertheless accuses of taking an illegitimate opinion in the matter regarding the simultaneous creation of body and soul. According to John, they reject the account of the Scriptures on the basis of the argument that a later creation of the soul would imply a lesser value than the body for the purpose of which it was created:

Нъ сего мъста душа дъвше сицие помыслихомъ побеседовати, иакоже неподобънъ църкъвни мажи добро житие нимаже глаголаша речките, идникој и кончено тъло съ душа и чловеческо сътворено; [...] нимъже въпрашаша нън речките, аще да послѣждѣ бъистъ душа тълесе, то горьши юестъ тъла, нимъже тога цѣща юестъ сътворена. (85-86; 216a)

This statement relates remarkably well with Gregory of Nyssa's criticism of Methodius of Olympus' opinion:

[...] and by this argument they prove that the flesh is more noble than the soul; that which was previously formed than that which was afterwards infused into it; for they say that the soul was made for the body, that the thing formed might not be without breath and motion; and that everything that is made for something else is surely less precious than that for which it is made. (Ch. 28, §1; M&W: 419)

Nor again are we in our doctrine to begin by making up man like a clay figure, and to say that the soul came into being for the sake of this; for surely in that case the intellectual nature would be shown to be less precious than the clay figure. But as man is one, the being consisting of soul and body, we are to suppose that the beginning of his existence is one, common to both parts, so that he should not be found to be antecedent and posterior to himself, if the bodily element were first in point of time, and the other were a later addition; (Ch. 29, §1; M&W: 420)

It is interesting to note that John the Exarch suggests that the argument that the soul would be less valuable as a later creation is not so much from these 'men of the church', but is put into their mouth by others in the form of a question ("нимъже въпрашаша нън нин речките"). These men themselves ("сих") would have replied to this assertion several times, saying that that which comes later should not therefore be of lesser worth:

[...] губѣ бѣ онѣмѣ въпрашавшиемъ и сини не вѣдѣ колически сѧтъ отъвѣщали. не бывають бѣ, да иже послѣждѣ вѣдѣтъ, то то хомужде и есть прѣвѣшанаго. (85-88; 216а-б)

Indeed, John's refutation has clear parallels in the De hominis opificio. The counter-argument – what is created later should not be of lesser value – seems to have been taken from the eighth chapter of Gregory's treatise, in which the same examples can be found: (1) the grass is created before the animals, but the animal is not of lesser worth than the grass, which is created exactly to serve as its food, and (2) the plants (De hominis opificio: the animals) were created before man, but man is not of lesser worth than the plants (De hominis opificio: the animals), which were created exactly for his purpose:

не бываєтъ бо, да іеже послахде бждетъ, то то хоужде іестъ пръвобъвъшааго. Травыноє бо съно прѣжде бесловесънааго скота сътворено быстъ, нъ пнця ради скотниѧ, нмъ же бытн бѣаше; а не скотъ бываше травы цѣща. и въсے же іестъство съменьноє н бесплодънааго дѣбніа проѫдбаніе, іеще же н іеже плодъ кръмашин творитъ, древле ѣло не бытніе прнведеню быстъ чловѣчска сѫщниѧ; нъ нѣстъ чловѣкъ акы того ради сътворенъ, нн іестъ хоужднн того овоща н дѣвка. (87-88; 216b)

τάχα γὰρ οὐ μόνον τὸ ἐκ τοῦ προχείρου νοούμενον διὰ τούτων μανθάνομεν, ὅτι τῶν ζώων ἔνεκεν ἡ πόα χρήσιμος ἐφάνη τῷ Κτίσαντι, διὰ δὲ τὸν ἀνθρωπὸν τὰ βιτά, οὐ χάριν πρὸ μὲν τῶν βιοσκημάτων ἡ ἐκείνων τροφὴ, πρὸ δὲ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τὸ ὑπηρετεῖν μέλλον τῇ ἀνθρωπίνῃ ζωῇ. (Ch. 8, §3; FORBES: 140)

for it may be that we learn from these facts not only the obvious thought, that grass appeared to the Creator useful for the sake of the animals, while the animals were made because of man, and that for this reason, before the animals there was made their food, and before man that which was to minister to human life. (M&W: 393)

According to John, it is rather the other way round, as indicated by the creation of mankind: the last to be created, Man, is the most precious because everything before him was created to be of use to him:

отъврънъ бо бъваеятъ: посълѣждѣ бъивъшааго чловѣка то въсе прѣжде варнвѣ бъистѣ, неизглаголемъи прѣмѣдростн въсе то осажднвъшн прѣжде на потрѣбл чловѣкоу и на спѣхъ. да нѣстѣ оубо въсе, иже прѣжде сътворено посълѣдънѣаго, то же и чистынѣе иего. аще ли да нѣстѣ тако, то оуже въесь и гадъ, и пътица, и рыбы, и звѣрь, оунин чловѣка и чистынѣи обращетъ сѧ по наждн тацѣмы чиномъ, иムъже прѣжде чловѣка то бъистѣ. нъ опакъ се бъваеятъ паче иже бо прѣжде варнвѣ бъистѣ тѣхъ цѣща, иムъже бѣаше посълѣждѣ бѣтн. (87-90; 216б-с)

The same idea can be found throughout the De hominis opificio, most explicitly in chapters 2: Why man appeared last, after the creation, and 3: *That the nature of man is more precious than all the visible creation.*²⁹

Οὕπω γάρ τὸ μέγα τοῦτο καὶ τίμιον χρῆμα, ὁ ἄνθρωπος, τῷ κόσμῳ τῶν ὄντων ἐπεχωρίαζεν· οὐδὲ γάρ ἦν εἰκὸς, τὸν ἀρχοντα πρὸ τῶν ἀρχομένων ἀναφανῆναι, ἀλλὰ τῆς ἀρχῆς πρότερον ἔτοιμασθείσης, ἀκόλουθον ἦν ἀναδειχθῆναι τὸν βασιλεύοντα. (Ch. 2, §1; FORBES: 120)

For not as yet had that great and precious thing, man, come into the world of being; it was not to be looked for that the ruler should appear before the subjects of his rule; but when his dominion was prepared, the next step was that the king should be manifested. (M&W: 390)

John thus concludes that the body was formed before the soul, explicitly calling upon on the authority of Genesis 2:7:

да тѣмъ оубо по москвѣ повѣстн тѣло душа прѣждѣ быстѣ, вѣдѣмъшю творыцю прѣсть отъ земля н сътворыши иж н съсѣднѣвѣши брьнино н вѣсѣ бе чювѣства капище. по томъ же быстѣ душа божествынѣи мѣ вѣдомовенїемъ бес посрѣдниѧ сѫщина бывѣши н приимѣшн сѫшніе. (89-92; 216c-d)

John the Exarch mentions yet another allegation of these “men of the church”: they say that not only on the occasion of Creation, but also with the conception of a child in the mother’s womb body and soul are formed simultaneously: “иестъ же, рѣша, и прѣжде въ прѣвѣн твари и нынѣ въ коенжьдю ѿтробѣ твориціи младенци” (85-86; 216a). This is exactly what Gregory of Nyssa does in the first paragraphs of chapter 29 of the De hominis opificio:

but we are to say that in the power of God's foreknowledge [...] all the fulness of human nature had pre-existence [...] and in the creation of individuals not to place the one element before the other, neither the soul before the body, nor the contrary, that man may not be at strife against himself, by being divided by the difference in point of time. (Ch. 29, §1; M&W 420-421)

[...] – in the same way we suppose the human germ to possess the potentiality of its nature, sown with it at the first start of its existence, and that it is unfolded and manifested by a natural sequence as it proceeds to its perfect state [...] so that it is not true to say either that the soul exists before the body, or that the body exists without the soul, but that there is one beginning of both; (Ch. 29, §3; M&W: 421)

The idea of a simultaneous inception of body and soul is criticized by John again and again he bases his argument on the words of the Scriptures, namely Exodus 21:22-23: “ἐὰν δὲ μάχωνται δύο ἄνδρες καὶ πατάξωσιν γυναῖκα ἐν γαστρὶ ἔχουσαν, καὶ ἔξελθῃ τὸ παιδίον αὐτῆς μὴ ἔξεικονισμένον, ἐπιζήμιον ζημιαθήσεται· καθότι ἂν ἐπιβάλῃ ὁ ἀνήρ τῆς γυναικός, δώσει μετὰ ἀξιώματος· ἐὰν δὲ ἔξεικονισμένον ἢν, δώσει ψυχὴν ὀντὶ ψυχῆς.”³⁰ John thus argues that also at conception the soul only gets ‘added’ to the body when this is completely formed.

И въ нынѣ, въ зачалѣ младицемъ въ жтробѣ, прѣжде бываетъ тѣло вълнианіемъ съменѣнїемъ, словесемъ промыслынїемъ юстество ...; послѣждѣ же душѣ въдастъ прѣмѣдрѣи сѫщю творьць, иакоже самъ вѣстъ. се бо по вѣдатъ и мѹсн вѣликыи законъ полагаѧ и глагола: аще да кото радиета сѧ дѣла мѣжа и оу разната женѣ въ жтробѣ нмѣшѣ и нѣндѣтъ дѣтиць юа обраꙑ нѣ нмѣ, то тѣщетоик да оутѣщентъ сѧ, иакоже ѳадеждѣтъ мѣжъ женѣ тоѧ, и дастъ сѣ дѣстоництвомъ; аще ли обраꙑ нмѣшѣ, то дастъ душѣ въ душа мѣсто. авѣ вѣликыи мѹсн, нмъже тако положи сѫдъ, иакоже послѣждѣ бываетъ въшестніе души, посвѣтворенни тѣлеснѣи и образованни, показа. (91-94; 216d-217a)

Gregory of Nyssa, on the other hand, underlines the unity of body and soul by comparing the soul with a seed, which already carries all the elements of the future plant in itself. Likewise, according to Gregory, the male semen is not inanimate but latently contains all the characteristics and functions of both the body and the soul (viz. Ch. 29, §3-11):³¹

For as the body proceeds from a very small origin to the perfect state, so also the operation of the soul, growing in correspondence with the subject, gains and increases with it. For as its first formation there comes first of all its power of growth and nutriment alone [...]; then [...] the gift of sensibility blossoms in addition, but when at last it is ripened and has grown up to its proper height, the power of reason begins to shine forth [...] (Ch. 29, §8; M&W: 421-422)

so that hereby also it is clear [...] that the thing which was implanted by separation from the living body for the production of the living being was not a thing dead or inanimate in the laboratory of nature. (Ch. 29, §10; M&W: 422)

It is no coincidence that John the Exarch refers to the male semen at the same point in his argumentation. He also treats the various life functions that can be found in Gregory’s text – the nutritive, the sensual-perceptive and the rational.

³⁰ “If men strive, and hurt a woman with child, so that her fruit depart from her before it has taken shape [Šestodnev: обраꙑ нѣ нмѣ] he shall be surely punished, according as the woman’s husband will lay upon him; and he shall pay as the judges determine. And if it has already taken shape [Šestodnev: аще ли обраꙑ нмѣшѣ], then thou shalt give life for life.”

³¹ Cf. the parallel in Gregory’s De anima et resurrectione – for which see supra note 26: “For every one can see for himself that not one amongst all the things that are inanimate or soulless possesses any power of motion or of growth; whereas there is no question about that which is bred in the uterus both growing and moving from place to place. It remains therefore that we must think that the point of commencement of existence is one and the same for body and soul. [...] in this very same way that which is secreted from a man for the planting of a man is itself to a certain extent a living being as much gifted with a soul and as capable of nourishing itself as that from which it comes. If this offshoot, in its diminutiveness, cannot contain at first all the activities and movements of the soul, we need not be surprised; for neither in the seed of corn is there visible all at once the ear” (M&W: 458-459; PG 46: 125).

However, John lays the emphasis on that which does not yet exist in the embryo: the rational and immortal soul:

а іеже съма исходнитъ мажъскою и прѣпомѣщаемо въ ложе женьска полю, тъчніж нматъ слали юднны юстъствънааго жицата, нми же растетъ кръма са не нмы въ себѣ чютиныа нн шистънииа, боле же паче нн разумнвааго нн размѣслнвааго сѫщна, бесъмртъниа душа. [...] (97-100; 217c-d)

It is thus clear, according to John – both from what man sees in nature as from the Genesis account of the Creation – that the body is formed first before the soul:

въсе се гржбо юстъ, о немъ же прїходнитъ ны и вельми са чюднти, како се юстъ, ильма же и юстъствъноумоу чину съказалицию и великоумоу монсеви и по пръвааго чловѣка сътвореню и по прїсновѣвіаішюмоу прѣждѣ състайлцию са тѣлесъноумоу юстъством. въсе то наставиетъ, иакоже прѣждѣ тѣло са състанетъ, ти потомъ бждѣтъ душънои вѣтніе. (101-102; 218a)

The Exarch expresses his astonishment that these ‘men of the Church’ (“снн”) reject what is so evident and that they accept a doctrine that contradicts the Holy Scriptures (101-104; 218a-218b). On this point John stops referring to his opponents – these ‘men of the Church’ – in the plural, but suddenly speaks of a “great teacher of the Church” (“великааго учитеља цркъвънааго”). John has only one explanation for the contradictions in the work of this ‘great teacher’: it must have been corrupted by heretics. These heretics would have infused their own reprehensible ideas into his doctrine like “poison in honey”,³² so that people would also reject his other doctrinal statements on account of these words.

Да того цѣща подоба юстъ разумѣвати намъ, иако же нѣстъ то свое учение великааго учитеља цркъвънааго, нѣ искажено юстъ въмѣшилциемъ юретникомъ свое զзлаја оученија акви иадѣ въ мѣдѣ въмѣшѣје, да биша отъ сихъ словесъ и ннѣхъ иемоу оучении не прїнимали. (103-104; 218b)

Only now does John reveal the name of the unfortunate ‘teacher of the Church’: it is Gregory, who is in nothing second to his brother Basil:

ГРНГОРНН ВО ЧСТЬНЫИ, ТАКОЖЕ Н РОДОМЬ ПРНСНЫИ БРДЪ ВЕЛНКОУМОУ ВАСИЛНЮ ИСТЬ, ТАКО ЖЕ Н ОУМОМЬ Н ВЕРОИЖ Н ДОБРЫИМЬ НЗВОЛЕННИЕМЬ, НСТННЬННКЪ Н НЕ ХОУЖДНН ОНОГО ННЧНМЪЖЕ, НЪ ВСЕКЫ ХЫТРОСТИ Н МЖДРОСТИ НСПЛННЕНЪ. (103-106; 218b-c)

John proceeds by stating that there are many untrue theories mixed into Gregory's doctrine by those who have the custom "to corrupt the true doctrine in many instances". Gregory would have had the habit to hand out his writings to unreliable people, who asked for permission to copy them. In addition, John refers to yet another cause that makes Gregory's doctrine susceptible to heretical interpolations, but he refrains from mentioning it:

ПО МЪНОГА ЖЕ МѢСТА ВЪ ОУЧЕННІЕ ІЕГО СНЦА ОУЧЕННІА НЕПОДОБНА ВЪМѢШАНА СѢТЪ ТѢМН, НЖЕ ОБЗІЧАН НМЖТЪ, НСТННЬНОЕ ПРАВОВѢРЪСТВО ПО МЪНОГА МѢСТА КАЖНТН. НМЪЖЕ, КЕГДА ЧЬТО ПНША ТО ВЪДДАШЕ ПРОСАЦННМЪ ІЕ ПРѢПНСАТН, А СѢЩЕМЪ ВРАГОМЪ МЪНОГЫИМЪ КРНВОВѢРЫНЫИМЪ. МѢНАТЪ ЖЕ Н ДРУГЖІЖ ВННЖ, КІАЖЕ ЦѢЩА ОУДОБЬ БѢАШЕ, ВЪ ОУЧЕННІА ІЕГО ВЪМѢШАТИ СВОЯ СЛОВЕСА СѢПРОТИВЪНЫИМЪ; НЪ О СЕМЬ Н СЕ ДОВЪЛЪІЕТЪ. (103-106; 218b-c)

It is clear that John does not want to accuse the bishop of Nyssa of heresy. Here it must also be noted that allegations about heretic interpolations in Gregory's writings – due to his adoption of Origen's doctrine concerning the apokatastasis – were current since Germanus of Constantinople (Patriarch 715-730).³³ On account of the supposed contradictions in Gregory's treatise and by reason of the existing idea on heresy in his writings it was possible for John to depict the church father as a victim of heretical interpolations.

Whereas the fragment described above relies heavily on chapter 29 of the De hominis opificio, the subsequent fragment (105-150; 218c-224a) contains a refutation of the beliefs attributed to Origen concerning the pre-existence and the transmigration of souls in chapter 28 of Gregory's treatise. John the Exarch directly confronts the heretics who claim that the souls already existed before the bodies and that these souls departed from their incorporeal and sublime life out of their own free will to sink down into bodies:

А ЧЬТО НМАМЪ КЪ ВАМЪ ГЛАГОЛАТН! КЪ ІЕРЕТНКОМЪ, НЖЕ ГЛАГОЛІЖТЪ ДОУША СѢЩА ПРѢЖДЕ ТѢЛЕСЪ, СЪПЛЪЗНЖВЪША СА БЕСПЛЪТНЫИА ЖИЖНН Н ОУНШААГО СТРОІА, ОТЪ

³³ See J. DANIÉLOU, "L'apocatastase chez Grégoire de Nysse", Recherches de Science Religieuse 30 (1940): 335-336 : "Dans une apologie de Grégoire de Nysse que nous n'avons plus, mais dont Photius nous a conservé le résumé dans sa Bibliothèque, Germain de Constantinople prétendait formellement que Grégoire n'avait pas enseigné l'apocatastase et que les passages incriminés, celui de la Vie de Moïse en particulier, étaient des falsifications introduites dans son œuvre par des hérétiques, soucieux de détruire son autorité. Cette opinion sera désormais traditionnelle dans l'Église grecque. On la trouve dans la notice de Nicéphore Calliste sur Grégoire de Nysse." For the excerpt from Photius' Myriobiblon, see PG 103: 1105-1108; for the fragment from Nicephorus Callistus' Historia ecclesiastica, see PG 146: 627-630.

Нѣкакого съврашенїя и своевольнаго несъмѣсла и лѣностї, и въ тѣлеса чловѣческа въходаща. (105-108; 218c-d)

This time John the Exarch does adopt the arguments of the bishop of Nyssa, as well as his description of the false doctrine: the heretics believe that the souls are capable to return to their original state; however, if these souls incline towards the material and lower level of existence, they sink down further and consequently end up in animals and vegetation to eventually end in nothingness and to stop existing altogether:

Ти аще въ нихъ сѫща паче си добрѣншѣ жицнь оудобрятъ, то и въ дрѣвнини пакы въннаджть оустрон. аще ли любаща паче сеѧ вндиныѧ веци [и] жицнн и прильпаша нихъ на низъкое са съплъзнатъ, то пакы състѣпятъ и въ горьшини образъ скотини и отътѣдли пакы въ садви и въ вѣсѣко дрѣво въходатъ и сътѣнтие въ небытни е отнаджть и погибнатъ. иажда бо семоу тако быти, кѣльмаже душа на оуньшиник сеbe не прѣмѣнтижть, нѣ на горьшиник. (107-110; 218d-219a)

Although it is a simplification of Gregory's wording, the passage offers a remarkable parallel to the paragraphs 3-6 of chapter 28 from the De hominis opificio:³⁴

For if the soul, being severed from the more exalted state by some wickedness, after having once, as they say, tasted corporeal life, again becomes a man, and if the life in the flesh is, as may be presumed, acknowledged to be, in comparison with the eternal and incorporeal life, more subject to passion, it naturally follows that that which comes to be in a life such as to contain more occasions of sin, is both placed in a region of greater wickedness and rendered more subject of passion than before [...]; and that being brought into close connection with this, it descends to the brute nature [...] Thus it will of necessity be continually changed for the worse, always proceeding to what is more degraded and always finding out what is worse than the nature in which it is: and just as the sensible nature is lower than the rational, so too ther is a descent from this to the insensible. (Ch. 28 §4)

Strict inference points to the complete destruction of the soul; for that which has once fallen from the exalted state will be unable to halt at any measure of wickedness, but will pass by means of its relation with the passions from rational to irrational, and from the latter state will be transferred to the insensibility of plants; and on the insensible there borders, so to say, the inanimate; and on this again follows the non-existent, so that absolutely by this train of reasoning they will have the soul to pass into nothing: thus a return once more to the better state is impossible for it: and yet they make the soul return from a bush to the man. (Ch. 28 §5; M&W: 420)

Here John introduces an (original?) piece of rhetoric, elaborating on the question how it is possible for people to believe in the pre-existence of the souls: “Δα ιήε τάκ्यι βλαδη ή βασηη προποβδαιήτη, το τέχνη βηπρασαημό ρεκάψε: κακο μενητε δηψα πρέζηδε εψηα τέλεσ?” (109-110; 219a) The first inquiry that is addressed the heretics deals with the question, whether they have read the books of Moses or not: “ποχηταψη λη κβηηγηη μοψεωη, въ ннхъ же глаголетъ рекы, сътвримъ чловѣка [...] нали нѣстъ почнтали? (109-110; 219a) If they have not read them, then nothing can redeem them: “Δа аще отъвѣщаите въторомоу словеси въпрашанниа сего, то ннкакоже васъ не можетъ слово нцѣлнти, ильма же отъчатали са юестъ” (109-112; 219a-b), while their senseless faith would be incomprehensible had they indeed read it: “Δа аще пръвои рекжтъ, то скоро оглдишатъ отъвѣтъ, рекжемъ наимъ: то како велнкоумоу монсевиин повбдайцию и рекжцию: богъ глагола, сътвримъ чловѣка [...] да и по сему юестъ огченнио іавѣ въдѣти, иакоже тѣгда быстъ пръваго чловѣка душа, ияже не бѣ прѣждѣ, а въи прѣждѣ иж быившѣ проповѣдаите зъловѣрьи и дрѣзѣ” (113-116; 219c-d). If they do know the books of Moses, then a second question needs to be put across to them: do they believe the words of Moses, or not? “нъ како акы ли велнкоумоу монсевиин не вѣроуищє, нали акы вѣроуищє?” (115-116; 219d) In the first instance, namely, if they do not accept the Mosaic writings, it would mean that they also do not believe in God – “Δа аще пръвои, то обрѣтаите са іавѣ, иакоже и творицию богоу не вѣроуите” (115-116; 219d) – the words of Moses are after all the Word of God. When the heretics claim to believe in his words, then they must also keep account with the precise formulation and meaning of the words: “аще въторое речете и вѣроуите велнкоумоу монсевиин, то разумѣнте, како ти рече: и съзъда богъ чловѣка [...]” (117-118; 220a).

John elaborates even further on Gregory's arguments. He states that it becomes perfectly clear from the words of the Scriptures that the soul could not have existed before God blew the breath of life into the first man, but that it started existing at that very moment. Nothing did exist before it was created as narrated in Genesis; God created everything out of nothing (117-128; 220a-221b):

[...] да ильмаже, иегда на лнцѣ въздуинъ адаму, тѣгда же быстъ душа божествнааго въдомуовеннаа благодатниј, то добре, іавѣ то юестъ вндѣти, иакоже прѣждѣ не бѣаше ияа [...] и въ въсен же твари сего миа иже нѣстъ испрѣва бѣло, то то твориимо юестъ [...] нъ не, иже прѣждѣ бѣло. (117-120; 220a-b)

According to John, the wording of Genesis 2:7 – especially the expression “the breath of life” – clearly excludes the kind of bodiless souls that fall down from their exalted state into human or animal bodies. Moreover, If such a thing would be true, all creatures would have the same kind of soul as Man – a soul that is immaterial, rational and immortal:

рече же, дъхновенниe жиvота, да покажетъ разлиचие беспльтииa и беъвешниiа и разумничиiа и словесниiа и бесъмртъниiа душа, рекъше, та же отъпала iesть отъ добреиша жиzни и остроя. [...] то и прѣждѣ сътворенниa чловѣкоу въсъ жиvотъ, иже нѣ воды и нѣ нѣ земля и нѣ въздухъ по образу божиу быша и по подобиству, иже така нѣ донде душа, та же послѣждѣ имъ чловѣкъ беспльтиi и бесълаъниi и разумничиi и съмвисльниi и бесъмртъниi. (221a-b)

[...] глаголиюще, иероже несть подова въровати, та же прѣждѣ вънндеятъ въ чловѣка, та же са iesть съ миъша съпльзла душа, ти ииакак же ии миъшииi и сътвориъши въ iesтьствѣ проходнти паки сквозъ скотъ и звѣрь и гадъ. ви же коиеждо отъ тѣхъ исповѣдасте, та же прѣждѣ чловѣча бытия съмвисльниi душа и разумничиi и бесъмртъниi приишли сѫтъ. (221d)

If one believes in such an idea, then the godly assignment to man to rule over the rest of creation and to use other creatures as food³⁵ would make no sense at all:

ако, акви ли иедииносѫщъио и тогожде iesтьства акви чловѣци, власти повелъ ииѣмн жиvоти въсѣмн и въ брашна мѣсто имѣти та же и зелни, наи акви иного рода сѫщие и iesтьства? [...] аще ли наречете пръвои, то юже иедииноплеменниикви и иедииносѫщъии кви прииалъ iesть чловѣкъ власти и настн, и въссе, иже заколетъ, овѣцъ и горадо, наи иеленъ наи жеравъ наи ино чѣто, иже симъ жижчино, разумничиi и размвисльниi душа обрѣтають са отълпчай отъ тѣлесе и тождесѫщъиi и тогожде рода закалай и нады. (135-138; 222b-c)³⁶

According to John, Scripture clearly indicates that the other creatures are of a different nature and that they do not possess a rational soul, but an instinctive, bodily and mortal one (“и чюдъи и пльтии и съмртъни”) (141-142; 223a). Indeed, Scripture clearly indicates that the soul of the animal is its blood: “та же въсего жиvота душа кръвъ иего iesть” (141-142; 223a).³⁷ To emphasize the difference between the human and the animal soul John returns to the fact that man has an upright stature as a sign of his rationality, an argument which can be found elsewhere in book VI,³⁸ as well as with Basil³⁹ and Gregory:⁴⁰

³⁶ The same line of thought can be found in Gregory’s De anima et resurrectione: “With such beliefs a man will look even upon hemlock as not alien to his own nature, detecting, as he does, humanity in the plant. [...] and we find even the fruit of the ears of corn upon which we live are plants; how, then, can one put in the sickle to cut them down; and how can one squeeze the bunch, or pull up the thistle from the field, or gather flowers, or hunt birds, or set fire to the logs of the funeral pyre: it being all the while uncertain whether we are not laying violent hands on kinsmen, or ancestors, or fellow-country-men, and whether it is not through the medium of some body of theirs that the fire is being kindled, and the cup mixed, and the food prepared?” (M&W: 154-455; PG 46: 112)

аще бо прочни жи воти тажде, иже и чловекъ, прежде сътъ прнialи душъ, то нестъ подоба нхъ жи вотъ бесловесънънхъ зъвати, ни нмъ образа такого аспо нмѣти на землю зъраца; и просто нмъ бы тѣло, якоже и чловекъ, якоже горъ гладати къ лжичнѣи и разумънїи оутвари, естьство пронвжъ своимъ слаѣ съврьшаинше дѣнствы разумнчнїи душа и съмыслынїи. (141-144; 223а-б)

Finally, John concludes his argumentation by stating that every kind of creature received its own natural and unchangeable characteristics, and that, apart from Man, no other creature has received a rational soul.⁴¹ In this manner he rejects the idea that souls can fall down to a lower level of existence as a form of punishment:

тако же по тому обрѣтаіжъ сѧ твораще мѣни, не инако, нѣ по своему къжьдѹ рѹдѹ, а и есть ѹнати, ии хѹда слѣда, съг҃рѣшивъшѹ дѹшѹ и тѣмъ отъпадьшѹ и въ сиць сѣдь горьшини осажденї калѣни. да сен сице обличенѣ довољнѣ, рекъше блазнинѣн вѣрѣ, иже мѣнатъ прѣждѣ сѣща дѹша [...] (147-150; 223d-224a)

It is clear from the preceding analysis that John the Exarch drew upon chapters 28 and 29 of the De hominis opificio for this passage from book VI of the Šestodnev. The procedure is clear: John follows the structure of Gregory's argumentation but rejects that which he finds to be unacceptable on the basis of a literal reading of the Scriptures. Furthermore, he omits everything that does not suit his

⁴¹ Cf. Gregory's De anima et resurrectione: "To say that one and the same soul [...] is at one time a rational and intellectual soul, and that then it is caverned along with the reptiles, or herds with the birds, or is a beast of burden [...] – to say this, is nothing short of making all things the same and believing that one single nature runs through all beings." (M&W: 454; PG 46: 109).

argumentation, he shifts, simplifies, repeats and adds some new arguments.⁴² It must be noted that John's dependence on Gregory's treatise can be sensed to a smaller or larger degree in a number of other passages from the Šestodnev.

4. The 'Homiliae De creatione hominis'

Although the influence of Gregory's De hominis opificio has been clearly indicated, some passages of book VI are completely atypical for the writings of the bishop of Nyssa. One point in particular must be mentioned as a point of dissimilarity, namely the usage of the concepts 'image' (εἰκών) and 'likeness' (όμοίωσις) as they occur in Genesis 1:26: "καὶ εἶπεν ὁ θεός Ποιήσωμεν ἄνθρωπον κατ' εἰκόνα ἡμετέραν καὶ καθ' ὄμοίωσιν." Gregory himself does not differentiate between the two,⁴³ but John the Exarch draws a distinction between οὐραζъ and подобьство/подоби€ in up to four instances. According to John, man has received the οὐραζъ-image as a part of his nature and rank as autonomous and rational being, while the подоби€-likeness is a kind of completion and restoration, which he can obtain by striving to achieve God's likeness out of his own free will.

A similar distinction is made by some of the Fathers, e.g. by Irenaeus of Lyon,⁴⁵ by Clemens of Alexandria,⁴⁶ by Origen in his De principiis,⁴⁷ and by Maximus

Confessor.⁴⁸ John Damascene writes in the 26th chapter of his De fide: “τὸ μὲν γὰρ ‘κατ’ εἰκόνα’ τὸ νοερὸν δηλοῖ καὶ αὐτεξούσιον, τὸ δὲ ‘καθ’ οἷμοίωσιν’ τὴν τῆς ἀρετῆς κατὰ τὸ δυνατὸν ὄμοίωσιν”, “the expression in the image refers to the rational and the autonomous, the expression in the likeness refers to the likeness achieved in the practising of virtue according to one’s ability”.⁴⁹

However, this distinction is lengthily described – as it is in the Šestodnev – in one of two Homiliae de creatione hominis (CPG 3215 and 3216), two homilies on the Creation sometimes considered to be the tenth and eleventh homily of Basil’s Hexaemeron, now attributed to Gregory and then again to Basil.⁵⁰ Accordingly we read in the first homily that we are indeed created in God’s image, but that the true likeness to God can only be repaired in us through our free will.⁵¹ Following is a short fragment⁵² that illustrates the parallel with John’s text:

Ποιήσωμεν ἄνθρωπον κατ’ εἰκόνα ἡμετέραν καὶ καθ’ ὄμοίωσιν. Τὸ μὲν τῇ κτίσει ἔχομεν, τὸ δὲ ἐκ προαιρέσεως κατορθοῦμεν. Ἐν τῇ πρώτῃ κατασκευῇ συνυπάρχει ἡμῖν τὸ κατ’ εἰκόνα γεγενῆσθαι Θεοῦ, ἐκ προαιρέσεως ἡμῖν κατορθοῦται τὸ καθ’ ὄμοίωσιν εἶναι Θεοῦ.

‘Créons l’Homme à notre image et à notre ressemblance’. Nous possédons l’un par la création, nous acquérons l’autre par la volonté. Dans la première structure, ik nous est

⁴⁷ Cf. his De principiis (CPG 1482), book III, chapter 6: “Now the fact that he said, ‘He made him in the image of God’, and was silent about the likeness, points to nothing else but this, that man received the honour of God’s image in his first creation, whereas the perfection of God’s likeness was reserved for him at the consummation. The purpose of this was that man should acquire it for himself by his own earnest efforts to imitate God, so that while the possibility of attaining perfection was given to him in the beginning through the honour of the ‘image’, he should in the end through the accomplishment of these works obtain for himself the perfect ‘likeness.’” G.W. BUTTERWORTH, Origen On First Principles Being Koetschau’s Text of the ‘De Principiis’ Translated into English, Together with an Introduction and Notes. New York 1966: 245. donné d'être nés à l'image de Dieu; par la volonté se forme en nous l'être à la ressemblance de Dieu.⁵³

The fact that these homilies were often handed down together with Basil's homilies on the Creation and Gregory's De hominis opificio, namely within a particular variant of the already mentioned 'Hexaemeron corpus',⁵⁴ makes it probable that the Exarch drew upon them for writing his Šestodnev. John's treatment of the distinction between 'image' and 'likeness' may perfectly well go back to the short formulation of John Damascene and the longish passage on this distinction in the first homily De creatione hominis.

There is, for that matter, another significant point of contact with the mentioned homilies, namely the argument concerning trinitarian implications in the scriptural passages Genesis 1:26 – "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness" – and Genesis 1:27 – "So God created man in his own image". In book VI of the Šestodnev the plural used in "let us make" and the singular of "God created" are brought in relation with the doctrine of the Trinity (11-20; 206d-207d):

И в югда хотѣ чловѣка сътвориши, то сици рече, сътвориши чловѣка, и юднно божество и тѣн событва наизнаменовиа [...] да тѣмъ и къде и сътвори и съврьши до коньца, то пакъи приведзи рече, и сътвори богъ. по обрадози божниу сътвори и [...] троица бо юстъ юднно, и юднно юстъ троица событви и юднно пакъи юстъствомъ. (11-14, 206d-207a; 17-18, 207c)

The same argumentation is put forward rather extensively in the first homily De creatione hominis (§3-4) – a fragment:⁵⁵

Νῦν μέντοι “Ποιήσωμεν”, ἵνα γνωρίσῃς Πατέρα καὶ Υἱὸν καὶ Πνεῦμα ἄγιον. “Ἐποίησεν ὁ Θεὸς τὸν ἀνθρωπὸν”, ἵνα ἐνώσῃς τὴν θεότητα, ἐνώσῃς δὲ οὐ τὰς ὑποστάσεις ἀλλὰ τῇ δυνάμει, ἵνα μίαν δόξαν ἔχῃς μὴ μεριζόμενος περὶ τὴν προσκύνησιν, μὴ μεριζόμενος εἰς πολυθείαν.

Mais la parole 'Créons' est dite assurément pour que tu reconnaises le Père, le Fils et l'Esprit-Saint. (La parole) 'Dieu créa l'Homme' (est dite) afin que tu conserves l'unité dans la divinité, sans conserver l'unité dans les hypostases, si ce n'est sous le rapport de la puissance, afin que tu rendes une gloire unique à Dieu sans faire de division dans l'adoration, division qui tournerait au polythéisme.⁵⁶

In this passage John anticipates a fragment at the end of Basil's ninth homily, which he translates further down in book VI and where a similar argumentation

⁵³ SMETS & VAN ESBROECK, Basile de Césarée: 206-207.

⁵⁴ Cf. supra note 18; viz. the so-called 'extended' or 'large corpus', see СЕЛЬС, Славянский 'Корпун Гекзамерона': 620.

⁵⁶ Op. cit.: 174-175.

is used.⁵⁷ However, John's treatment bears a striking resemblance with that of the homilies.

One may conclude that both similarities regarding the content as well as particulars concerning the Greek tradition confirm the possibility of influence of these homilies De creatione hominis on John's Šestodnev. However, on account of the fact that similar lines of argument occur with other patristic authors the hypothesis must be considered plausible but as yet unproven.

5. Conclusion

It is clear that John the Exarch did not only draw upon Basil's Homiliae IX in Hexaemeron to compile book VI of his Šestodnev, but that he also used other texts from the larger body of the 'Hexaemeron-corpus'. This dependence has been established for Gregory of Nyssa's anthropological treatise De hominis opificio and it is highly likely for the two homilies De creatione hominis.

The analysis of fragment VI, 85-150 (216a-224a) about the nature and the creation of body and soul illustrates the way in which the Exarch deals with his sources. The authority of a church father like Gregory of Nyssa does not cause him to flinch when he is convinced that the latter's opinions need to be criticized. Although John borrows from his source the broad frame of his exposition as well as particular arguments, he does reject or adopt the positions of his source within a cautiously built up argumentation of his own signature.

Many questions remain concerning the sources of the Šestodnev and the issue certainly retains its significance: every judgment over the Exarch's own voice, his viewpoints on theological matters, and his compilation art will remain premature without insight into the nature of his sources and the way he arranged and assimilated them.

2. Ἐπεὶ οὖν ἐν ἀμφοτέραις ταῖς ὑπολήψεσιν ὁ λόγος ὑπαίτιος, τῶν τε προβιοτεύειν τὰς ψυχὰς ἐν ἰδίᾳ τινὶ καταστάσει μυθολογούντων καὶ τῶν ὑστέρας τῶν σωμάτων κατασκευάζεσθαι νομιζόντων, ἀναγκαῖον ἄν εἴη μηδὲν τῶν ἐν τοῖς δόγμασι λεγομένων περιϊδεῖν ἀνεξέταστον. ἀλλὰ τὸ μὲν δι' ἀκριβείας τοὺς ἐκατέρωθεν γυμνάζειν λόγους καὶ πάσας ἐκκαλύπτειν τὰς ἐγκειμένας ἀτοπίας ταῖς ὑπολήψεσι, μακροῦ ἄν δέοιτο καὶ λόγου καὶ χρόνου; δι' ὀλίγων δὲ, καθὼς ἐστι δυνατὸν, ἐκάτερον τῶν εἰρημένων ἐπισκεψάμενοι, πάλιν τῶν προκειμένων ἀντιληψόμεθα.

3. Οἱ τῷ προτέρῳ παριστάμενοι λόγω καὶ πρεσβυτέραν τῆς ἐν σαρκὶ ζωῆς τὴν πολιτείαν τῶν ψυχῶν δογματίζοντες, οὐ μοι δοκοῦσι τῶν Ἑλληνικῶν καθαρεύειν δογμάτων τῶν περὶ τῆς μετενσωματώσεως αὐτοῖς μεμυθολογημένων· εἰ γάρ τις ἀκριβῶς ἐξετάσειε, πρὸς τοῦτο κατὰ πᾶσαν ἀνάγκην τὸν λόγον αὐτοῖς εὐρήσει κατασυρόμενον. Φασί τινα τῶν παρ' ἐκείνοις σοφῶν εἰρηκέναι, ὅτι ἀνὴρ γέγονεν ὁ αὐτὸς, καὶ γυναικὸς σῶμα μετημφιάσατο, καὶ μετ' ὀρνέων ἀνέπτη, καὶ θάμνος ἔφυ, καὶ τὸν ἔνυδρον ἔλαχε βίον – οὐ πόρρω τῆς ἀληθείας, κατά γε τὴν ἐμὴν κρίσιν, φερόμενος ὁ περὶ ἑαυτοῦ ταῦτα λέγων· ὅντως γὰρ βατράχων τινῶν ἡ κολοιῶν φλυαρίας ἡ ἀλογίας ἵχθυων ἡ δρυῶν ἀναισθησίας ἕξια τὰ τοιαῦτα δόγματα, τὸ μίαν ψυχὴν λέγειν διὰ τοσούτων ἐλθεῖν.

4. Τῆς δὲ τοιαύτης ἀτοπίας αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ αἰτία, τὸ προϋφεστάναι τὰς ψυχὰς οἰεσθαι· δι' ἀκολούθου γὰρ ἡ ἀρχὴ τοῦ τοιούτου δόγματος ἐπὶ τὸ προσεχές τε καὶ παρακείμενον τὸν λόγον προάγουσα, μέχρι τούτου τερατευομένη διέξεισιν· εἰ γὰρ διά τινος κακίας ἀποσπασθεῖσα τῆς ὑψηλοτέρας ἡ ψυχὴ πολιτείας, μετὰ τὸ (καθὼς φασιν) ἄπαξ γεύσασθαι τοῦ σωματικοῦ βίου πάλιν ἀνθρωπὸς γίνεται· ἐμπαθέστερος δὲ πάντως ὁ ἐν σαρκὶ βίος ὁμολογεῖται παρὰ τὸν ἀΐδιον καὶ ἀσώματον. 5. Ἀλλὰ μέχρι τούτου προϊῶν ὁ λόγος αὐτοῖς, εἰ καὶ ἔξω τῆς ἀληθείας φέρεται, ἀλλά γε διά τινος ἀκολουθίας τὸ ἄτοπον ἔξ ἀτόπου μεταλαμβάνει· τὸ δὲ ἐντεῦθεν ἡδη διὰ τῶν ἀσυναρτήτων αὐτοῖς τὸ δόγμα μυθοποεῖται. ἡ μὲν γὰρ ἀκολουθία παντελῆ διαφθορὰν τῆς ψυχῆς ὑποδείκνυσιν· ἡ γὰρ ἀπαξ τῆς ὑψηλῆς πολιτείας ἀπολισθήσασα, ἐν οὐδενὶ μέτρῳ κακίας στῆναι δυνήσεται, ἀλλὰ, διὰ τῆς πρὸς τὰ πάθη σχέσεως, ἀπὸ μὲν τοῦ λογικοῦ πρὸς τὸ ἄλογον μεταβήσεται· ἀπ' ἐκείνου δὲ πρὸς τὴν τῶν φυτῶν ἀναισθησίαν μετατεθήσεται· τῷ δὲ ἀναισθήτῳ γειτνιὰ πως τὸ ἄψυχον· τούτῳ δὲ τὸ ἀνύπαρκτον ἔπειται· ὥστε καθόλου διὰ τῆς ἀκολουθίας πρὸς τὸ μὴ ὄν αὐτοῖς ἡ ψυχὴ μεταχωρήσει· οὐκοῦν ἀμήχανος αὐτῇ πάλιν ἔξ ἀνάγκης ἐσται ἡ πρὸς τὸ κρείττον ἐπάνοδος ἀλλὰ μὴν ἐκ θάμνου ἐπὶ τὸν ἀνθρωπὸν τὴν ψυχὴν ἐπανάγουσιν. οὐκοῦν προτιμοτέραν τὴν ἐν θάμνῳ ζωὴν τῆς ἀσωμάτου διαγωγῆς ἐκ τούτων ἀποδεικνύουσι.

3. Ἀλλ’ ὥσπερ ἐν τῷ σίτῳ φαμὲν ἥ ἐν ἑτέρῳ τινὶ τῶν σπερμάτων, ἅπαν ἐμπεριειλῆφθαι τῇ δυνάμει τὸ κατὰ τὸν στάχυν εἶδος, τὸν χόρτον, τὴν καλάμην, τὰς διὰ μέσου ζώνας, τὸν καρπὸν, τοὺς ἀνθέρικας, καὶ οὐδὲν τούτων ἐν τῷ τῆς φύσεως λόγῳ προϋπάρχειν ἥ προγίνεσθαι φαμεν τῇ φύσει τοῦ σπέρματος, ἀλλὰ τάξει μὲν τινὶ φυσικῇ τὴν ἐγκειμένην τῷ σπέρματι δύναμιν φαινεροῦσθαι, οὐ μὴν ἑτέραν ἐπεισκρίνεσθαι φύσιν – κατὰ τὸν αὐτὸν λόγον καὶ τὴν ἀνθρωπίνην σπορὰν ἔχειν ὑπειλήφαμεν, ἐν τῇ πρώτῃ τῆς συστάσεως ἀφορμῇ συνεσπαρμένην τὴν τῆς φύσεως δύναμιν· ἔξαπλοῦσθαι δὲ καὶ φανεροῦσθαι διά τινος φυσικῆς ἀκολουθίας πρὸς τὸ τέλειον προϊοῦσαν, οὐ προσλαμβάνονταν τι τῶν ἔξωθεν εἰς ἀφορμὴν τελειώσεως· ἀλλ’ ἔαυτὴν εἰς τὸ τέλειον δι’ ἀκολουθίας προάγουσαν· ὡς μήτε ψυχὴν πρὸ τοῦ σώματος μήτε χωρὶς ψυχῆς τὸ σῶμα ἀληθὲς εἶναι λέγειν, ἀλλὰ μίαν ἀμφοτέρων ἀρχὴν, κατὰ μὲν τὸν ὑψηλότερον λόγον, ἐν τῷ πρώτῳ τοῦ Θεοῦ (286) βουλήματι καταβληθεῖσαν, κατὰ δὲ τὸν ἔτερον, ἐν ταῖς τῆς γενέσεως ἀφορμαῖς συνισταμένην.

4. Ως γὰρ οὐκ ἔστι τὴν κατὰ τὰ μέλη διάρθρωσιν ἐνιδεῖν τῷ πρὸς τὴν σύλληψιν τοῦ σώματος ἐντιθεμένῳ πρὸ τῆς διαπλάσεως· οὕτως οὐδὲ τὰς τῆς ψυχῆς ἰδιότητας ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ δυνατόν ἔστι κατανοῆσαι, πρὶν προελθεῖν εἰς ἐνέργειαν· καὶ ὥσπερ οὐκ ἄν τις ἀμφιβάλοι πρὸς τὰς τῶν ἀρθρῶν τε καὶ σπλάγχνων διαφορὰς ἐκεῖνο τὸ ἐντεθὲν σχηματίζεσθαι, οὐκ ἄλλης τινὸς δυνάμεως ἐπεισερχομένης, ἀλλὰ τῆς ἐγκειμένης φυσικῶς πρὸς τὴν ἐνέργειαν ταύτην μεθισταμένης· οὕτω καὶ περὶ ψυχῆς ἀναλόγως ἔστι τὸ ἵσον ὑπονοῆσαι, ὅτι κἄν μὴ διά τινων ἐνεργειῶν ἐν τῷ φαινομένῳ γνωρίζηται, οὐδὲν ἥττόν ἔστιν ἐν ἐκείνῳ· καὶ γὰρ καὶ τὸ εἶδος τοῦ μέλλοντος συνίστασθαι ἀνθρώπου ἐν ἐκείνῳ ἔστι τῇ δυνάμει, λανθάνει δὲ διὰ τὸ μὴ εἶναι δυνατὸν πρὸ τῆς ἀναγκαίας ἀκολουθίας ἀναφανῆναι· οὕτω καὶ ἡ ψυχὴ, ἔστι μὲν ἐν ἐκείνῳ καὶ μὴ φαινομένη, φανήσεται δὲ διὰ τῆς οἰκείας ἔαυτῆς καὶ κατὰ φύσιν ἐνεργείας, τῇ σωματικῇ αὐξήσει συμπροϊοῦσα.

5. Ἐπειδὴ γὰρ οὐκ ἀπὸ νεκροῦ σώματος ἡ πρὸς τὴν σύλληψιν δύναμις ἀποκρίνεται ἀλλ’ ἔξ ἐμψύχου καὶ ζῶντος· διὰ τοῦτο φαμεν εὔλογον εἶναι μὴ νεκρὸν καὶ ἄψυχον οἰεσθαι τὸ ἀπὸ ζῶντος εἰς ζωῆς ἀφορμὴν προϊέμενον· τὸ γὰρ ἐν σαρκὶ ἄψυχον, καὶ νεκρόν ἔστι πάντως· ἡ δὲ νεκρότης κατὰ στέρησιν ψυχῆς γίνεται· οὐκ ἄν δέ τις ἐπὶ τούτου πρεσβυτέραν τῆς ἔξεως εἴποι τὴν στέρησιν, εἴπερ τὸ ἄψυχον, ὅπερ νεκρότης ἔστι, τῆς ψυχῆς εἶναι τις κατασκευάζοι πρεσβύτερον. εἰ δέ τις καὶ ἐναργέστερον ζητοί τεκμήριον τοῦ ζῆν ἐκείνο τὸ μέρος ὅπερ ἀρχὴ τοῦ κατασκευαζομένου γίνεται ζώου, δυνατόν ἔστι καὶ δι’ ἄλλων σημείων δι’ ὃν τὸ ἔμψυχον ἐκ τοῦ νεκροῦ διακρίνεται, καὶ περὶ τούτου κατανοῆσαι· τεκμήριον γὰρ τοῦ ζῆν ἐπὶ τῶν ἀνθρώπων ποιούμεθα, τὸ θερμὸν εἶναι τινα καὶ ἐνεργὸν καὶ (288) κινούμενον· τὸ δὲ κατεψυγμένον τε καὶ ἀκίνητον ἐπὶ τῶν σωμάτων, οὐδὲν ἔτερον εἰ μὴ νεκρότης ἔστιν.

6. Ἐπειδὴ τοίνυν ἔνθερμόν τε καὶ ἐνεργὸν θεωροῦμεν τοῦτο περὶ οὐ τὸν λόγον ποιούμεθα, τὸ μηδὲ ἄψυχον εἶναι διὰ τούτων συντεκμαιρόμεθα· ἀλλ’ ὥσπερ κατὰ τὸ σωματικὸν αὐτοῦ μέρος, οὐ σάρκα φαμὲν αὐτὸν καὶ ὀστέα καὶ τρίχας καὶ ὅσα περὶ τὸ ἀνθρώπινον καθορᾶται, ἀλλὰ τῇ δυνάμει μὲν εἶναι τούτων ἔκαστον, οὕπω δὲ κατὰ τὸ ὄρώμενον φαίνεσθαι· οὕτω καὶ ἐπὶ τοῦ ψυχικοῦ μέρους, οὕπω μὲν τὸ λογικὸν καὶ ἐπιθυμητικὸν καὶ θυμοειδὲς καὶ ὅσα περὶ ψυχῆν καθορᾶται, καὶ ἐν ἐκείνῳ χώραν ἔχειν φαμὲν, ἀναλόγως δὲ τῆς τοῦ σώματος κατασκευῆς τε καὶ τελειώσεως, καὶ τὰς τῆς ψυχῆς ἐνεργείας τῷ ὑποκειμένῳ συναύξεσθαι.

7. Ὡσπερ γὰρ τελειωθεὶς ὁ ἀνθρωπός, ἐν τοῖς μείζοσιν ἔχει διαφαινομένην τῆς ψυχῆς τὴν ἐνέργειαν· οὕτως ἐν ἀρχῇ τῆς συστάσεως τὴν κατάλληλόν τε καὶ σύμμετρον τῇ παρούσῃ χρείᾳ συνέργειαν τῆς ψυχῆς ἐφ’ ἔαυτοῦ διαδείκνυσιν, ἐν τῷ κατασκευάζειν αὐτὴν διὰ τῆς ἐντεθείσης ὅλης τὸ προσφυὲς οἰκητῆριον· οὐδὲ γὰρ εἶναι δυνατὸν λογιζόμεθα, ἀλλοτρίαις οἰκοδομαῖς τὴν ψυχὴν ἐναρμόζεσθαι, ὡς οὐκ ἔστι τὴν ἐν τῷ κηρῷ σφραγίδα πρὸς ἀλλοτρίαν ἄρμοσθῆναι γλυφήν.

8. Καθάπερ γὰρ τὸ σῶμα ἐκ βραχυτάτου πρὸς τὸ τέλειον πρόεισιν, οὕτω καὶ ἡ τῆς ψυχῆς ἐνέργεια καταλλήλως ἐμφυομένη τῷ ὑποκειμένῳ, συνεπιδίδωσι καὶ συναύξεται· προηγεῖται μὲν γὰρ αὐτῆς ἐν τῇ πρώτῃ κατασκευῇ οἷον ρίζης τινὸς ἐν τῇ γῇ κατακρυφθείσης ἡ αὐξητική τε καὶ θρεπτικὴ δύναμις μόνη· οὐ γὰρ χωρεῖ τὸ περισσότερον ἡ τοῦ δεχομένου βραχύτης· εἴτα, προελθόντος εἰς φῶς τοῦ φυτοῦ καὶ ἡλίῳ τὴν βλάστην δείξαντος, ἡ αἰσθητικὴ χάρις ἐπήνθησεν· ἀδρυνθέντος δὲ ἥδη καὶ εἰς σύμμετρον μῆκος ἀναδραμόντος, καθάπερ τις καρπὸς διαλάμπειν ἡ λογικὴ δύναμις ἄρχεται, οὐ πᾶσα ἀθρόως ἐκφαινομένη, ἀλλὰ (290) τῇ τοῦ ὀργάνου τελειώσει δι’ ἐπιμελείας συναύξουσα, τοσοῦτον ἀεὶ καρποφοροῦσα ὅσον χωρεῖ τοῦ ὑποκειμένου ἡ δύναμις.

9. Εἰ δὲ ζητεῖς ἐν τῇ τοῦ σώματος πλάσει τὰς ψυχικὰς ἐνεργείας, πρόσεχε σεαυτῷ, φησὶ Μωϋσῆς, καὶ ἀναγνώσῃ καθάπερ ἐν βίβλῳ τῶν τῆς ψυχῆς ἔργων τὴν ἴστορίαν· αὐτῇ γάρ σοι διηγεῖται ἡ φύσις, λόγου παντὸς ἐναργέστερον, τὰς ποικίλας ἐν τῷ σώματι τῆς ψυχῆς ἀσχολίας ἐν ταῖς καθόλου καὶ ἐν ταῖς ἐπὶ μέρους κατασκευαῖς.

10. Ἀλλὰ περιττὸν οἶμαι λόγῳ τὰ καθ’ ἡμᾶς αὐτοὺς διεξιέναι, καθάπέρ τι τῶν ὑπερορίων διηγουμένους θαυμάτων· τίς γὰρ ἔαυτὸν βλέπων, λόγῳ δεῖται τὴν οἰκείαν φύσιν διδάσκεσθαι; δυνατὸν γάρ ἔστι, τὸν τῆς ζωῆς τρόπον κατανοήσαντα καὶ ὡς πρὸς πᾶσαν ζωτικὴν ἐνέργειαν ἐπιτηδείως ἔχει τὸ σῶμα καταμαθόντα, γνῶναι περὶ τί κατησχολήθη τὸ φυσικὸν τῆς ψυχῆς παρὰ τὴν πρώτην τοῦ γινομένου διάπλασιν· ὥστε καὶ διὰ τούτου φανερὸν εἶναι τοῖς οὐκ ἀνεπισκέπτοις, τὸ μὴ νεκρόν τε καὶ ἄψυχον ἐν τῷ ἐργαστηρίῳ γενέσθαι τῆς φύσεως ὃ πρὸς τὴν τοῦ ζῶου φυτείαν ἐκ τοῦ ζῶντος σώματος ἀποσπασθὲν ἐνετέθη.

11. Καὶ γὰρ καὶ τῶν καρπῶν τὰς ἐντεριώνας καὶ τὰς τῶν ρίζῶν ἀποσπάδας οὐ νεκρωθείσας τῆς ἐγκειμένης τῇ φύσει ζωτικῆς δυνάμεως τῇ γῇ καταβάλλομεν, ἀλλὰ συντηρούσας ἐν ἑαυταῖς, κεκρυμμένην μὲν ζῶσαν δὲ πάντως, τοῦ πρωτοτύπου τὴν ἰδιότητα· τὴν δὲ τοιαύτην δύναμιν οὐκ ἐντίθησιν ἡ περιέχουσα γῇ ἔξωθεν παρ’ ἔαυτῆς ἐπεισκρίνουσα – ἢ γὰρ ἂν καὶ τὰ νεκρὰ τῶν ξύλων εἰς βλάστην προήγετο – ἀλλὰ τὴν ἐγκειμένην ἔκδηλον ἀπεργάζεται, διὰ τῆς οἰκείας ἵκμάδος τιθηνούμενη, εἰς ρίζαν καὶ φλοιόν καὶ ἐντεριώνην καὶ τὰς τῶν κλάδων ἐκφύσεις τὸ φυτὸν τελειούσα· ὅπερ οὐχ οἶόν τε ἦν γίνεσθαι, μή τινος φυσικῆς δυνάμεως συνεντεθείσης, ἥτις τὴν συγγενῆ καὶ κατάλληλον ἐκ τῶν παρακειμένων τροφὴν εἰς ἑαυτὴν ἔλκουσα, θάμνος ἢ δένδρον ἢ στάχυς ἢ τι τῶν φρυγανικῶν βλαστημάτων ἐγένετο.

РЕЗЮМЕ

Можно смело утверждать, что Шестоднев Иоанна Экзарха является одним из величайших достижений старославянской литературы эпохи царя Симеона. Хотя в науке, особенно после выхода издания Айцетмюллера (Graz 1958-1975), этому эзекетическому произведению Иоанна уделяется достаточно много внимания, сравнительно мало работ было посвящено византийским прототипам. Кроме частей текста, которые напрямую связаны с основными первоисточниками Экзарха – Беседы на Шестоднев (или Гексамерон) Василия Кесарийского (CPG 4194), Беседы о творении мира Северина Габальского (CPG 4194) и, в случае с первым ‘Словом’, с трактатом Феодорита Кирского Излечение эллинских недугов (CPG 6210) – в Шестодневе встречаются длинные фрагменты, которые до сих пор не были сопоставлены с греческими параллельными текстами.

Один из таких фрагментов представляет собой часть шестого ‘Слова’, посвященной созданию Человека. Целью данного исследования является проведение критического анализа греческих источников для этого фрагмента Шестоднева (Айцетмюллер: VI, 85-150), опираясь на греческую традицию так называемого ‘корпуса Гексамерона’ – собрание текстов, сгруппированных вокруг Бесед о творении мира Василия, которые включают работу Григория Нисского Об устройении человека (CPG 3154). Доказывается, что антропологический трактат Григория стал важным источником для написания шестого ‘Слова’ Иоанна Экзарха, несмотря на подозрения о присутствии в нем элементов ереси. Предположения Иоанна об еретической направленности текста Григория объясняют осторожное отношение к этому источнику. Кроме того, в целях лучшего понимания композиции шестого ‘Слова’, да и Шестоднева в целом, анализ затрагивает и прочие возможные патристические источники.
